WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

Warm and mostly dry weather will continue this week with the weather pattern dominated by high pressure. A few showers are possible over the mountains Friday afternoon and evening. Night and morning low clouds are expected most days at the coast.

San Francisco Weather:

A slight cooling trend is expected through the remainder of the week with a return of onshore flow. The return of onshore flow will push low clouds and maybe even some drizzle to the coast. Otherwise dry weather through the remainder of the week.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

High pressure over the western U.S. will bring fair skies and well above normal temperatures through most of the week. A weak Pacific low pressure system will weaken the west coast ridge and bring a threat of showers and thunderstorms to the mountains for the end of the week.

Hanford Weather:

Temperatures will continue well above normal through Thursday as a strong ridge of high pressure remains over the area. An approaching low pressure center will bring some cooling and a slight chance of mountain showers on Friday and Saturday.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION: (Con't)

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Above normal afternoon temperatures will persist through Thursday. The onshore flow will increase into Thursday for a cooling trend and to deepen the marine layer. A low will approach by Friday and add to the marine layer and cool the temperatures to around normal. The low should exit on Sunday for a slight warming trend into early next week.

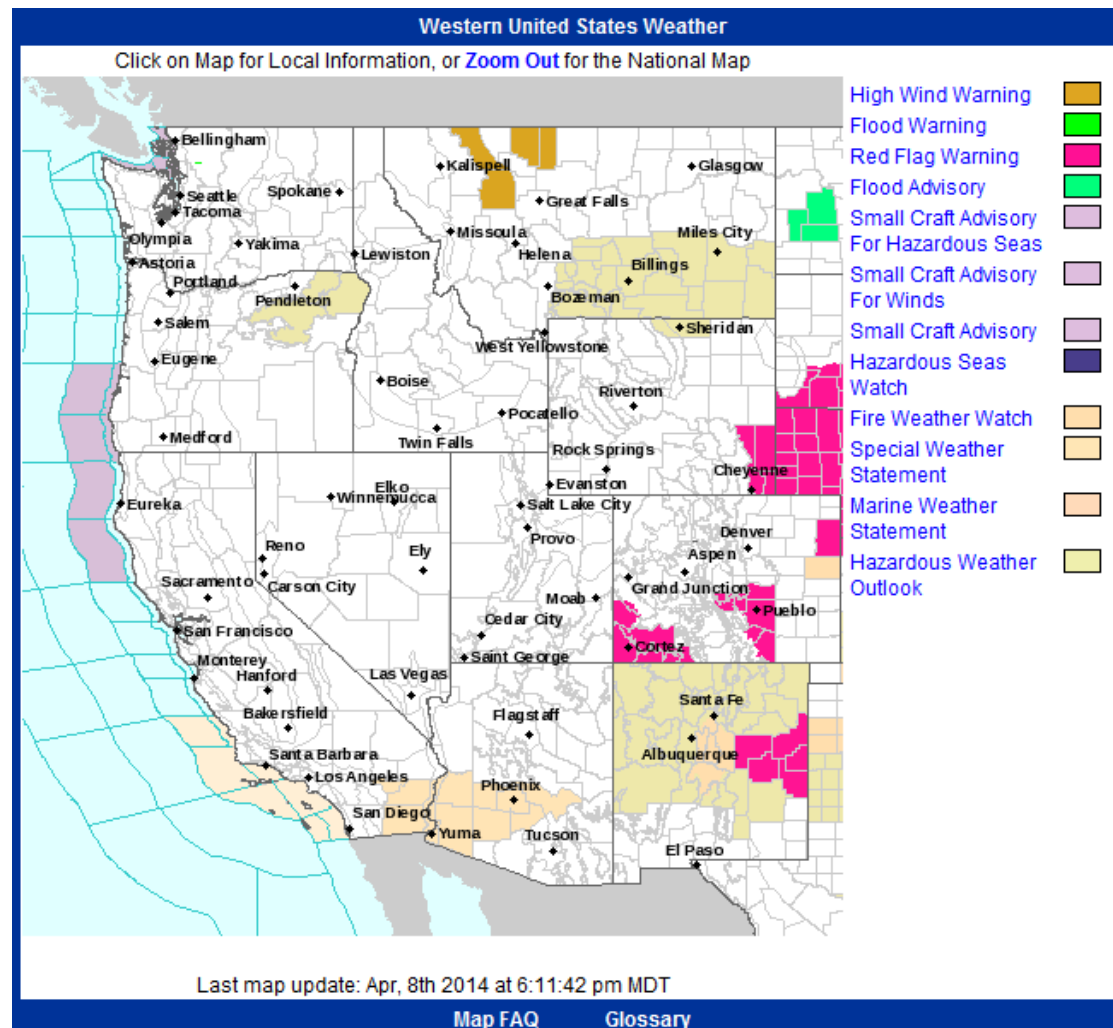

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

High pressure over the southwest will bring unseasonably warm weather through Wednesday. Stronger onshore flow will bring minor cooling Thursday. On Friday and Saturday an upper level low will move inland across southern California bringing cooler weather and a slight chance of light showers over the mountains. It is forecasted to be dry and warm Sunday and Monday with high pressure rebuilding aloft.

Southeast California Weather:

High pressure will bring warm weather to the area over the next few days with highs reaching into the 90s across much of the Mojave Desert region. Temperatures will decrease several degrees late in the week as a weather system moves into the area but still remain several degrees above normal.

Situational Summary – 2014 Drought

Information as of 4/7/14

On January 17, 2014 Governor Edmund G. Brown proclaimed a State of Emergency and directed state officials to take all necessary actions to prepare for drought conditions. The State Operation Center (SOC) is activated to implement objectives in support of the Governor's priorities. The lack of winter rain and snowfall has resulted in extremely dry conditions in many parts of the State. Reservoir levels are down significantly from where they should be on average for this time of year. If conditions continue without substantial rainfall, severe impacts to municipal water supplies, agriculture (plants and livestock) and firefighting capabilities are likely in store for the State over the next few months. Negative economic impacts will also result.

Another storm moved across Northern California on Monday and Tuesday, with low-pressure conditions creating additional storms through Wednesday. Storms will move east beyond California between Wednesday and Friday as a high pressure, dry system builds over the region.

As our state's rainy season nears its end, much of California has received only about half of normal precipitation for this rainy season. Heavy rain and snow would have to fall throughout California most days in April to reach average annual rain and snowfall levels, which is highly unlikely. Even with such precipitation, California would remain in drought conditions, due to low water supplies in reservoirs from the two previous dry years.

The drought could result in severe impacts to the municipal water supplies, wells, agriculture (plants and livestock) and firefighting capabilities for several months. The SOC continues to be activated to monitor the situation statewide, and support regional and local operational areas.

Information as of 4/7/14

- The Taskforce continues to meet regularly to take actions that conserve water and coordinate state response to the drought.
- The most recent snowpack survey, conducted on February 27, recorded California snowpack at 24% of normal. The next snowpack survey will be conducted April 1. A more recent update using automated devices shows snowpack at 29% of normal as of March 30.
- DWR has announced that water essential for health and safety will be delivered through the state water project in spite of the zero allocation policy. Deliveries will be boosted if storms produce enough rain and snow to increase reservoir storage and the snow pack.
- Cal OES continues to gather drought-related costs from state agencies and local governments.
